The main purpose of the “Kyoto Breast Cancer Consensus Conference 2009 International Convention”, which was inaugurated in 2007, is to build a consensus from a clinical point of view between physicians involved in the treatment and diagnosis of breast cancer, particularly in the following three key areas; The application of clinical practice, Local management of primary breast cancer with or without systemic therapy, Improving the Quality of Life of patients.

The conference will consist of six sessions and five seminars. On the final day there will be a special lecture and “consensus voting” by key participating doctors. The consensus which will be decided by the ‘consensus voting’ on the final day of the conference will be used as a guideline by breast cancer doctors at an international level.

In advance of the conference a detailed questionnaire about clinical practice has been distributed to breast cancer specialists worldwide. The results of this questionnaire will be actively discussed by panelists at the conference. After the discussions, it is hoped that worldwide concrete agreements will be formed between expert doctors regarding breast cancer treatment. Further conferences will follow in the future, hopefully leading to an improvement in Quality of Life of breast cancer patient.
